Farewell message from General Secretary, Kohei Yamada

Dear Friends in YMCA movements:

Time flies so fast. After the GA in Korea (September 2015), I am almost at the corner of my retirement. This is like a dream to me but it is real. I am both excited for my new life and also sad to leave Hong Kong, friends in church, in Judo Dojo, comfortable office with our staff members from 7 countries, and all the connections with my international friends like you.

As you may know, at the time of APAY General Assembly in September, we appointed Mr. Nam Boo Won, presently National General Secretary of National Council of YMCAs of Korea. He was in APAY for four years as an Executive Staff in the late 1990's. He will be assuming the GS of APAY starting November 1, 2015. I on the other hand will stay for two weeks in Hong Kong for handing over the GS work to the new leadership and will leave Hong Kong on November 15.

Let me take a moment here to say how much I have enjoyed my work at APAY. This job was never really a "job" but rather an adventure, always something new happened. I met many people, encountered good stories and sometimes had difficult challenges. It has truly been a blessing to work with you all and I appreciate all of your support.

People ask me what I will do after returning to Japan. I have a house in Utsunomiya City, 120 km north of Tokyo where we raised our three children from kindergarten to university. So this place is a special place with comfortable environment since it is surrounded by rice fields, mountains, a river, and old friends. I liked the nature in daily life and I missed it very much while I was here in Hong Kong. I plan to make a small garden for vegetables that we can eat at home. There are a few Onsen (hot springs) near our house as well.

In 1973 I went to the USA to study, I was planning to get a good business job. But after staying in the USA for a while, I changed my career plan to Social work. Life in the USA in the late 70's was exciting but at the same time I realized the social issues and gaps between people. I then decided to study Social Work. After going to a Master of Social Work program in Baltimore, USA, I saw a short video of elderly and their feelings of being burdens to his/her families. It was a shocking story and I then decided that this is my life work. I studied Gerontology (Study of the Elderly) till I graduated from the University. My first job, after applying to over 50 organizations, was the YMCA in Baltimore. It was the YMCA that took me as a Director of Senior Citizens' Programs in their YMCA in August 1977. I enjoyed the work very much since the elderly members gave me so much confidence and encouragement to my work. After two years of work there, I moved back to Tokyo to test myself in the Japanese society. My first job in Tokyo was at the Tokyo YMCA in April 1979. Since then I moved to the Tochigi YMCA in 1984, moved back to Tokyo YMCA in 1995, and became a National Council staff in 2002. Then due to the death of the former GS of APAY, Mr. Yip Kok Chung in 2008, I was appointed his successor from June 2009. This is my YMCA story. It has been led by some unknown hands and many people around me at the YMCAs I was in, I am sure.

Being retired, one thing I want to do is to complete my mission to help elderly people to fulfill their lives till they die, including mine and my wife's own elder lives. I will help make happy elder lives to many people in Japan, in Asia and in the world.

Keep in touch. Thank you so much for supporting me in the YMCA for many years.

~ Kohei Yamada

SOP Participants complete Two Modules

Ampatuan A-Esha Afdal from the Philippines shares her essay for the second module of SOP

Interfaith Cooperation Forum (ICF) hosted its seventh School of Peace (SOP) in Siem Reap, Cambodia, beginning on Aug. 1. The 15 participants included two YMCA members from China whose introduction to ICF was due to the participation of several YMCA youth from China in the mini-SOP on the Peace Boat voyage from Japan to Okinawa to Taiwan in March 2015 that was organized by the World Alliance of YMCAs (WAY), the Asia and Pacific Alliance of YMCAs (APAY) and ICF. Other SOP participants at this year's SOP are from Cambodia, Indonesia, the Philippines, Timor-Leste and Vietnam. They completed the first two modules of the program on Sept. 29.

The focus of the first one-month SOP module was identity, resistance and liberation while the second module concentrated on poverty, development and rights. In addition to a variety of sessions on topics related to these two themes, the participants also had several field trips that included visits to a forest protected by Buddhist monks, the Killing Fields of Choeung Ek near Phnom Penh and the Killing Fields Museum in the capital in the former Tuol Svay Pray High School that became known as the S-21 torture center under the Khmer Rouge in the 1970s.

The participants returned home to their communities at the conclusion of the first two modules to put into practice what they have learned. They were also given several assignments to complete before returning in January 2016 for the last one-month module that will be devoted to ways to build interfaith communities of justice and peace. Among their assignments during the three-month break between the second and third modules, the participants are to find a case study of a marginalized community and the problems they are facing, conduct research on a peace hero, use a tool for transformation that they learned—drama, art, games, etc.—to help a group undertake structural analysis and lastly redraw the structure of their country using structural analysis and then draw a new structure that reflects their vision for the future.
