The Interfaith Cooperation Forum of Asia-Pacific Alliance of YMCAs (APAY) held a meeting of the Program Committee on April 24-25, 2018 in Metta Karuna, Siem Reap in Cambodia. A two-and-a-half days review workshop on Community Organizing followed on April 26-28, 2018 also in the same venue.

The agenda for the meeting was to plan for the activities set in the ICF project proposal for 2018-2020. This was attended by 3 women and 9 men from different religious traditions, members of the ICF Program Committee representing different national forums. The representatives who came were: Mahbuba Parvin and Biplob Ransa from Bangladesh; Moeu Chandara from Cambodia; Lioni Beatrik Tobing, Ade Nuriadin and Gunawan from Indonesia, Saw Say Moo from Myanmar; Bibek Shahi from Nepal; Tirmizy E. Abdullah from the Philippines; Ebenezer Darshan Vijayaretnam from Sri Lanka; Leonardo Gamboa Marçal from Timor Leste, and Romuelah Saeyeh from Thailand.

Among the activities planned were the two-month School of Peace (SOP), one to be held within 2018 to be held in Nepal, and another one in 2019 to be held the Philippines. A two-week Peace Institute will also be organized in Southeast Asia, possibly in Chiang Mai in Thailand, or in Indonesia, and the other one in South Asia that will possibly be held in either Sri Lanka or Bangladesh.

Ten (10) Thematic Training Workshops that will take 5-6 days had been indicated in the proposal. However, the Committee requested that the number of Trainings be reduced to eight (8) for better convenience. Moreover, the hosting of these Trainings will also depend on the willingness of each country, considering the availability of facilities and local resource persons. Plans lined up for the Thematic Training Workshops for the period are the following:

Gender Justice as a Peace Issue

The planning for the Asian Peace Summit in 2020 is left to the ICF Office. Highlights in the planning portion of the meeting included the sharing of each National Forum representatives on their local programs. Another was the passionate discussion on the shortened length of the SOP from three months to two months. Another was on the clamor to increase the budget for the Thematic Training Workshop and for the Local Advocacy and Follow up of SOPs.

From the side of ICF, stress was impressed on the understanding of the programs' output, outcome, and impact. There is so much work to be done in developing the modules needed for these lined-up activities. Gender balance, as well as balance of participants from YMCA, religious groups, and institutions were pointed out in choosing and endorsing participants to these activities.

The Thematic Training Program: Community Organizing

The thematic training program was a kind-of-review for the participants who have had undergone training in community organizing in the past SOPs. Two more male Cambodian participants joined the workshop. The Community Organizing workshop included a visit to the "Floating Village" in Chong Kneas. An orientation on the issue of statelessness in relation to the Vietnamese communities in the floating villages around the lake of Tonle Sap. To understand their situation, Sr. Denise Coghlan, RSM, the founder and director of the Metta Karuna Reflection Center gave the participants an orientation on the history of stateless people in Cambodia and the goal of the United Nations to end statelessness in 2020. The visit to the village was helpful and probably good for alternative tourism, in understanding the phenomenon of statelessness of people being used as "anthropological museum."

The visit to the Floating Village was used as a jumping board for the workshop in CO, where three groups were asked to present their approach if they were to do organizing in that community. The sharing of the workshop outputs was followed by a review of the principles of community organizing and the importance of social investigation or analysis of the community. Max Ediger, assisted by Biplob Rangsa from Bangladesh, and Bibek Shahi from Nepal, facilitated the workshop.

As a response to the clamor for longer period to study CO, the ICF staff pointed out that learning CO is doing the actual organizing community, and that it is life-time process as each community situation is unique.

The said medical team will continue to support the project this year. On the other hand, the GATN activity has opened opportunities for LBYOC to enrich its learning in terms of program hosting and expanding its network. These include the registration of YMCA, hiring of full time staff and finding a suitable office. All of these actions are in view of making YMCA known to the community and accessible to potential members and young people. The organizing committee was encouraged to research, study and seek legal opinion in relation to its registration. Before the meeting ended, the committee announced that Ping Vinchalay accepted the role of a full time staff starting May. She will be assisted by for a month by one staff from Chiangmai YMCA.

HER STORY:

YMCA affirms my Christian values and social responsibility

↑ Nagako Okado, APAY Committee on Gender Equity Chair, presides committee meeting

I first encountered the YMCA Camp in the United States as an International Rotary Foundation scholarship student. I was then very fascinated by the spirit of YMCA for being together with the YOUTH. Thus, I have committed my time acting as a volunteer at Yokohama YMCA for more than 35 years now. Among the various volunteer works, I am particularly supporting landmine victims in Cambodia. This engagement started since 1998 along with my other colleagues.

Yokohama YMCA held a workshop for all members to think about indiscriminate weapon or the “anti-personnel landmine.” From this exposure, I started to set up a volunteer group for supporting landmine victims in Cambodia which was called Yokohama YMCA Organization Against Personal Landmines.

Since its inception, we have been supporting landmines victims especially the women by giving them education. This was because in the 1990s, Cambodia was the biggest victim country and women were given much less opportunities to be educated. I believe that people can change towards a healthier lifestyle if given the chance to build their potentials. I find this purpose similar to the YMCA mission of empowering all through the development of MIND, BODY and SPIRIT. Through this, the dignity of each person is given importance. The scholarship students we worked with in Cambodia encouragingly went back to their own hometown as teachers. It is my hope that the cycle of poverty would end through the education that was given to them.

As I continue every year to go to Cambodia to meet and communicate with all the scholarship students from our organization, I am also given the opportunity to learn more about fostering international understanding and intercultural harmony in this diverse society. Like the education shared to the scholars, this process have helped me improved my interpersonal and facilitation skills and it has given me confidence and many friends in my life. The sense of community and the family atmosphere of YMCA have motivated me to be consistent in achieving my goals. The friendships built through YMCA activities either through work or even simple good conversation, reminded me that we are not alone in our journey. Most importantly, being a volunteer at the YMCA has strongly affirmed my Christian values of love and compassion. The experience has nurtured also my social responsibility to contribute towards transformation not just of myself but of others who are less privilege.
