2nd APAY Global Citizenship Institute 2015

We are pleased to inform that the 2nd APAY Global Citizenship Institute was held from 22-30 April 2015, at Baguio city YMCA in Philippines. Twenty youths, both volunteers and staff, representing eleven national YMCA movements of Bangladesh, Cambodia, Hong Kong, Indonesia, Japan, Korea, Mongolia, Philippines, Singapore, Timor Leste and Vietnam participated at this intensive Global Citizenship Education Training Program. During this training the participants gained the knowledge and understanding about the social injustices and the burning issues of Asia and understood about today's globalized world and how we are interconnected with each other.

On the first day, the key note speaker was Dr. Erlinda Castro Palaganas, professor of Management, from the University of the Philippines Baguio. She contributed and strengthened participants to understand critical thinking on social realities/ issues and defined role and plan of actions as global citizens in social transformation. She shared about global citizenship concepts and the framework, how it relates to our responsibility for the transformation of the young people, to be active social participants in the development of our communities, region and at global level at large.

The participants were divided in two groups for field exposures and homestay. Cristina

Miranda, Executive Secretary of APAY gave an orientation how to collect data, interview people and about the background of the communities of exposure. This year, the field exposure was in selected two communities, the gold mining community & the farming community. The participants spent two days and two nights in the communities and met the people, they became a part of their lives during the short span of time. Upon their return they shared their experiences to the whole group. Professor Elmer Ferrer helped to analyse relevant issues what they had experienced in the communities. He talked about three important elements of social change;

- * Understanding the situation/context
- * Understanding the vision/goal
- * Understanding the methodology

Professor Ferrer shared general information about Global Citizenship perspective and source of the problem of global crisis. How important it is to build new culture, consensus on ultimate meaning and values, the industrialized world towards a new vision for the Earth. Such vision also needs to consider the plight of billions of people suffering from poverty, disease and dislocation in the underdeveloped countries. The new values need to be more inner-directed than outer-directed responsibility for the planet and its people needs to take precedence over economic advantage and ultimate expansion.

He highlighted YMCA perspective on Global citizenship. The YMCA motto is "That they maybe one", we are one and belong to one Earth and on humanity. The Global Citizenship education shall be youth-centered and holistic in approach and promote collaborative efforts with government, NGOs, other agencies and institutions and international collaboration and partnership. It is a platform to prepare the youth to become effective leaders and change agents in their respective communities. Finally, Professor Elmer Ferrer led the participants to think that global citizens are a catalyst of social change: enhancing values, principles and ethics, building and affirming strong personal foundations and ethics.

Kohei Yamada General Secretary of APAY conducted a session on how to make arrange field visit and address identified issues in their respective local situations. All the participants had to draw up their own action plan which they intend to implement upon return to their respective YMCAs.

The training concluded with high expectations that the participants shall hold follow up programs in their own YMCAs after this training. We thank the National Council of YMCA in Philippines and Baguio YMCA for their relentless support, which made this Global Citizenship Institute a success.

ICF Meetings in Sri Lanka Center on Curriculum Development

The ad hoc committee that has been given the task by Interfaith Cooperation Forum (ICF) to develop its concept of community organizing, or CO, met from April 27 to May 1 in Negombo, Sri Lanka. The purpose of the meeting was to look through the various resources that have been collected thus far and update them. Secondly, the ad hoc committee worked on a curriculum for future CO training programs. The curriculum is in three formats: a one-day introductory workshop, a one-week introductory workshop and a three-month comprehensive CO workshop. With the completion of these curricula, the ad hoc committee is ready to put them into use. The one-day and one-week workshops are designed for national coordinators' meetings and other similar programs. The extensive three-month workshop will be for groups willing to put the time and effort into becoming full-time organizers.

The first workshop will be held with the School of Peace (SOP) participants in 2015. Some members of the ad hoc committee will help as resource persons.

Meanwhile, curriculum development was also the center of discussion of ICF's ad hoc committee devoted to children's justpeace education that met from May 4 to 7, 2015, at the same venue. The small group attending this planning meeting were from ICF's network in Indonesia and Sri Lanka who work in their communities with children and their issues as well as ICF staff members based in Phnom Penh, Cambodia. In addition, there were two guests from outside of ICF's network from India and Palestine who also have a wealth of experience in the area of justpeace education for children.

During the meeting, the participants shared their own experiences of working with children in their contexts where conflict is common, and, based on this discussion, the outlines of ICF's curriculum for justpeace education for children were drafted. Within the next few months, the group hopes to finalize the curriculum.

In addition to this important subject, the meeting participants also discussed the completion of a resource book on justpeace education for children and presenting sessions on this topic to the participants of ICF's upcoming SOP that will be held in Siem Reap, Cambodia, beginning on Aug. 1.

Ad hoc committee members of ICF's justpeace education for children program take part in an exercise to help them devise a curriculum for the program.
